1.MMAHolic I just read about this, it seems that Casey had some neck issues and her husband Chris had to call for a ride at the end, and he said that his car was parked right outside the gym. I know that usually nobody does that these days but I was just thinking about how easy it is for somebody to make things harder for you if they don't like you. I know she is making $5,000 less than he was at his peak and I'm sure she misses the money, but she just needs to do what she has to do, but also be a little nice too. I'm sure he feels bad too. Might have been nice for her and her husband to have gone out to eat, hang out, or whatever with her team, however they do that in LA. We do that here in the states, and I'm sure she did this at his requests, and it was probably done more for her to meet the girls. I don't know. Enjoying the off season? I think she did a good job of it. Obviously doing the best she can, I'm sure she's very happy there. I just hate how she was made out to be the 'villain' of the story. She's at a different weight and in a different place mentally than she was in earlier in her career, though, and I think she took a risk. Some other fighters had comments to say about her decision. Yeah he is amazing. I think you can see why he was such a great champion. I never thought a BJJ fighter would make a good MMA fighter. I'm glad she is happy but I still think she made a big mistake. That's my opinion. I agree. I saw the interview a couple of days ago and saw his manager say that she could have done what he said and called for a ride but she didn't want to show weakness in front of her team. I'm not sure if that was true or not but I do believe she did the right thing. That's my opinion. I'm just saying, I agree that she's happy but I think she made a big mistake. She just didn't think it through. I hate the whole part that he just showed up on a different day or something, because no matter what she said (which is true) he was already there. I mean, if he wanted to see her gym, d0c515b9f4
