1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to the generation of a light wave which has a specific frequency. 2. Description of the Prior Art In recent years, the fast development of

computer technology and the progress of optical information processing have caused increasing demands for optical information media such as optical disks. With respect to a method for generating a light wave with a specific frequency, a method utilizing a laser-light-induced photo-cavity type oscillator is known, as disclosed, for example, in Japanese Patent Unexamined Publication No. 56-50254. This oscillator consists of two optical media, one being formed of a ruby plate and the other being formed of a lithium niobate ( $\text{LiNbO}_3$ ) crystal plate. An optical cavity is formed by bringing the two media closer together, while a laser beam, passing through the cavity, is split into two light beams propagating in the two media, respectively. In this oscillator, however, the crystal plate formed of  $\text{LiNbO}_3$  is relatively expensive. In addition, the  $\text{LiNbO}_3$  crystal has a relative large optical absorption, which results in a low efficiency of the optical system. Furthermore, the optical cavity formed by the two media is resonated by the two light beams, so that the difference in optical path between the two light beams is not reduced. This results in a small Q value of the oscillation.

Introduction

===== Obesity is a known risk factor for atherosclerosis. However, the relative contribution of obesity and abdominal obesity in the pathogenesis of coronary atherosclerosis is unknown. In the last decade, abdominal fat distribution measured by anthropometry or computed tomography has been shown to be more closely related to atherosclerosis than BMI or central obesity measured by ultrasonography. Our aim was to determine the
