Dangerous Dogs 1:32 pm Thu January 24, 2013 Cities Prohibit Dangerous Dogs From Public Parks Hoover, AL — A southeast Alabama city is in the business of keeping dogs safe. But some who've been bitten by Pit Bulls or other types of dogs, disagree. One can't tell from looking at the Cullman Parks and Recreation Department that it's the same city that banned the pit bull breed. Tracey Moore said a police officer at a park told her about her pit bull, Junior, biting one of her grandkids last summer. Moore said that the park is close to her home, so she takes her pit bull to the park every day. "This is where I can take him, so if he's eating or sleeping, I can take him here." Despite the ban in the city of Hoover, most dogs are allowed in parks here, including pit bulls. Moore said it's confusing, even scary, to see the city allow one breed, but not others. "I don't understand it. People come in here with Rottweilers and it's fine. People come in here with German Shepherds and they're all right, but then they come in here with pit bulls and it's not all right." And now the city is looking at another dog, the American Bulldog, for its ban. The city council is looking at an ordinance that would prohibit the city-owned property from being used for any animal that is deemed a "dangerous dog." The city is not banning the breed of dog from city parks. Instead, the ordinance would make the local government the judge and jury of what's a dangerous dog. "These dogs are not bred to be vicious or aggressive. These dogs are bred to be companion animals." The City Council will meet with the police department to see what type of enforcement they can come up with. The council also wants to make sure the ordinance doesn't affect other animals, including birds. "Because we've got a specific breed that is a pit bull, it would be a financial burden on the City of Cullman if we were 2d92ce491b
