California. He attended high school in Chino, California, where he played quarterback at Chino Hills High School. Hundley played college football at UCLA. As a freshman in 2010, he was named the Bruins' backup quarterback, after losing the starting job to Brett Hundley. In his first appearance as the Bruins' starter, he completed 24 of 35 passes for 237 yards, two touchdowns, and an interception in a 55–17 loss to Stanford. He struggled in his next appearance, however, against Arizona State, throwing two interceptions and losing a fumble in a 45–34 loss. As a
