I have an application that we created and now want to find out which plugins are used for it. Is there any way to do it without analyzing the source code? A: For Joomla! 1.6 it's possible to view and download the component-specific XML files, which contain all the configuration, and which show the author/developer of each component. See the [Joomla_Skeleton] for the XML files for 1.5, which are identical. A: From Joomla! 1.5 onwards, you can view your component's XML files by following these steps. Log in to your back-end (usually localhost/index.php/administrator). You will need to install the XML extension before you can view your XML files. This can be done from the Extensions menu. Navigate to Extensions -> XML Files. Q: Image loading in Python without GIL I am new to Python and trying to understand the effect of GIL (Global interpreter lock). In the following code, import cv2, numpy import time with numpy.load('/home/pruthvi/Desktop/Blackhat/lb2/130000/stored_image_00000_0.jpg') as loaded_image: im = cv2.imread('stored_image_00000_0.jpg', 0) cv2.waitKey(0) cv2.destroyAllWindows() print(len(im)) is the GIL effecting the program? If so, can someone explain what the pythonic way to load images is? A: Python's GIL is limited to threading because it prevents you from running more than 1 thread at a time.

It is a unique place. A place that blends several eclectic elements into one venue. It is a place that reflects all of the rich cultural, historical, and economic elements that exist in the great City of St. Louis. It's about the people, the history, and the future. How did it get started? It all started when partners, Raul Garcia and Norman Douglas were frustrated by the lack of options to change their life for the better. They were working in the music industry and they needed a place to connect and get inspired. So, they created the first Black Lion Barbershop in New Town. Before long, the Black Lion Barbershop became a thing of beauty. It was a great place to get a haircut and meet people. It became a place that promoted the local community and highlighted it's wealth of talent. From the great jazz musicians that Raul played for to the people that would walk through the doors to get a haircut or to do business.
