The way it is in the video games industry is a bit different. Some developers make these kinds of games and put them out for free, thinking that will entice you to buy their games. Other companies make games that are free-to-play with microtransactions, these are games that you can play for a bit, then use your cash to unlock more of the game. However, there are games that go the other route. It's called "free-to-play" but I think it's not really free at all. I've seen several games like this and I never actually download the game because I don't like to play games that make you pay real money to progress in a game. I don't think that's a fair way to play a game. But there are developers that are working on this problem and they're trying to make games that are more like a board game than a game that you have to grind through to get to a reward at the end. They want you to play their game for a long time and they don't want you to pay money for that. They want you to play their game because you enjoy it. Here's how it works. You play the game on your PC and you get to explore the game's world and you get to do a lot of different things. But, every time you want
