The German Tiger I is a heavy tank developed by Germany and used in World War II and later in the Cold War. The Sherman Firefly is used to be the main battle tank of the United States Armed Forces in the post-World War II era and into the Cold War period. The Tiger is technically inferior to the T34 in almost every way. In reality the Tiger tank was underperformed by its technical crews, the technical expertise and direction given by the director of staff (Korvettenkapitän) and the production was less than satisfactory. Final Fantasy VI: Final Fantasy VI, Final Fantasy VII, Final Fantasy VIII, Final Fantasy IX, Final Fantasy X-2, Final Fantasy XIII, Final Fantasy XIII-2, Final Fantasy Tactics A2, Final Fantasy Tactics A2 HD, Final Fantasy Tactics Advance, Final Fantasy Tactics Advance HD, The Final Fantasy Tactics: War of the Lions, and Final Fantasy Adventure all include versions of the World Tree and World of Ruin engine, which was derived from Final Fantasy Tactics. The engine is also used by Final Fantasy XVI. The engine was created by Tezuka Productions and Square. The relatively small amount of English-language material and iconography is the result of Square's decision to keep Final Fantasy XII from localization while becoming the most successful Final Fantasy title of all time in Japan. There are two designs of the T34: the original T34 (numbers 1–3 above) and the T34-85 (number 6 above). However, it is recognized that the T34-85 is an upgrade of the T34, as it was based on, among other designs, the T-34/85, the T-44 prototype, and was fully compatible with the T-44's design.
