Does anyone know if it is possible to disable the little clock when ever I add an application (ex. Skype)? A: It is possible to modify the user interface of Skype to remove that clock. You will need to check the skins that come with Skype and do some research to find the right information that you need to modify. Here is an example skin Example screen shot As you can see, the clock is under the Application menu on the top left. If you are having trouble finding the right location to change, you can always run the program while it is running and disable the clock by right clicking on the clock. You can do this by going into the settings of the app and under general settings look for Enable Window Transparency. [Anesthesia for orthopedic surgery]. Patients undergoing orthopedic surgery are not only young but also have other accompanying diseases. One must consider anesthetic risk and risks in their patients, in addition to the orthopedic procedure and the postoperative course. Especially in patients undergoing total joint arthroplasty, the use of anticoagulant drugs and hypercoagulable disorders must be taken into consideration, and the patients' needs must be considered in the decision-making process. The anesthesiologist must also be aware of the possibility of unexpected respiratory complications.) const; // Tests for all possible combinations of types, using both pointer and // base as the input type. // // Multiple tests are run here to make sure we're not getting a false // positive. static void TestValue(Type* type); static void TestValue(Type* type, Type* base); static void TestPointer(Type* type); static void TestPointer(Type* type, Type* base); // Tests that the given method returns a method descriptor. // // This tests if the given method is overridden, not if it is abstract or // has no implementation. // // @pre {type} is a method. // @pre {method} is a property getter, setter or constructor. void TestMethod(const Method* method); // Tests that the given method returns a method descriptor. // // This tests if the given method is abstract or has no implementation. //
