Landscape Photos Screensaver System Requirements: Operating System: Windows All Size: 68 Mb DownloadI've been building an app that is structured around a story and requires the user to insert their own. This has turned out to be a bit tricky. I've decided that the best way to handle this is to just allow users to create the story by themselves, but to provide some sample or template stories that they can copy/paste into the app. The problem is that I need to have an interface to provide users with the option to select the template to use when building their story, but I also don't want to force them to use a template if they've built their own. Ideally, I'd like a text or paragraph editor that allows them to use to all the interface elements, but allows me to have a template to fall back on if needed. Since most of my text elements are custom classes, I had already decided to go with a Content Builder, but I haven't really thought this out enough. This is why I'm looking for alternatives/alternatives to the Content Builder: Since this is going to be for a story-building app (based on a story) that I'd like my users to write/describe themselves, I want to allow them to use whatever text editor they choose. (Hence, a screen that asks them to input their own text or copy/paste text from a pre-existing text file.) However, since I've already written my own text editor in C#, I don't want to write my own full-fledged Content Builder. Instead, I want to allow the user to use
