Stopping Suicide Spree with a Geezer? Helena Petronella - A policeman stands in front of the gates to the Finsbury Park mosque on July 5, 2017, in London, England. The east London mosque has been targeted repeatedly by a man who has driven a van into worshippers around the area. (Photo by Dan Kitwood/Getty Images) June 23 (UPI) -- London police had a very unusual way of stopping a man who killed seven people on the streets of the city. Recently, four people were killed and nine others injured after a man driving a van deliberately struck pedestrians in Finsbury Park, near the city's famed Muslim mosque, in London. Suspect and victim identities weren't immediately known. The suspect, whose motives for the attacks aren't yet clear, was reported to be armed and wearing a fake suicide vest. "It was as if it was a real life film. You know that people have their own lives and you are thinking of your own life." Another man, who has served in the British military and had received similar treatments, said it helped him with his mental health problems. "To me, it was a second life," he said. "It sort of helped me find a new, broader perspective on life." The program, which is part of a war against domestic violence, violence and mental health issues, is called Operation Geezer. And so far, it appears to be working. "I'm thinking: 'No, I'm not going to do it anymore.'" Hope said.
