You can use Photoshop Elements if you only want to perform basic image adjustments. The function set is smaller than that of Photoshop, but it is good for general editing and is a good way to get started. Download a free 30-day trial of Photoshop Elements here: www.adobe.com/products/photoshop-elements.html (or from the online Adobe store). (You'll find more on the trials of Photoshop Elements later in this chapter.) For more advanced or specialized image-manipulation work, you need the full version of Photoshop. Figures 6-2 through 6-4 show you some of the features of the standard version of Photoshop. You find the feature set divided into the following areas: Picture Handling This area includes the standard functions such as resizing, rotations, cropping, and so on. View This area shows you the view mode — you can view, modify, hide, or show layers. Navigation This area enables you to navigate to and from various tools and locations. Window The window section of Photoshop has a variety of editing tools available for you to use. Media This is one of Photoshop's most powerful features. You find options for retrieving and importing images and manipulating various kinds of image content. Effects This area has filters for altering color. Slide Show This enables you to see your image arranged into a slideshow. You can perform a variety of tasks on your image. These include moving, resizing, adjusting color, cropping, recoloring (making a color bright or dark), sharpening, and many more. You can even create a new layer or layer group. (You can read more about layers in Chapter 10.) You can import media, such as JPEG or GIF files, into Photoshop. You can also use Windows Explorer to open files and navigate folders and organize your files. Figure 6-2: To import a file, simply click the Open button. Figure 6-3: Use the various adjustment sliders to adjust the look of your image. Figure 6-4: The Adjustments panel enables you to make changes to your image.

Q: Can I check if my checkbox is checked with jQuery? My html-code is this: Select a country Austria Belgium And I want to check if this checkbox is checked or not. `$('.ship_route').prop('checked')`; I really don't get it: This line only returns false if the element doesn't exist. This fiddle shows that my code doesn't work. How do I do this? Thanks. A: You should check the prop of the checkbox itself `$('.ship_route:checkbox')[0].checked` As the method is only for div and input types, the type must be set

The Liberal/Labour campaign is on a genuine upswing, now with more people actually saying they will vote for the party than the opposition. For the two parties, this is the best thing since they were founded in 1916, as they have more momentum than ever, and more members than ever before. For the Liberal and Labour parties, their respective leaders Charles Swanton and Jeremy Corbyn have been very astute in ensuring that both reach out to a wide and diverse audience, in hopes of attracting supporters from each of these demographics. For example: Liberal Democrats trying to attract young voters: Corbyn, who has often been portrayed as an old, communist man, is actually showing himself to be a young, non-communist voice for the ordinary, and his statements when broadcasting live, are invariably peppered with plenty of youthful vigour. The Liberal Democrats have been incredibly clever in pinning the "Old, back-ward-thinking, Conservatives" label on Corbyn and Swanton, and in doing so have made it absolutely clear that their candidates are indeed perfectly fit to lead the country, and bring about its great future. Labour trying to attract old people and non-leftist young people: Corbyn has repeatedly shown himself to be a man of the people, from speaking at rallies against the Iraq War, to speaking

Q: How should I implement a Django template I am pretty new to Django and Python, so this may just be dumb question, but I can't figure out how I should implement a Django template. I would like the header and footer of every template to be simple callable urls. So that if I call `{% get_header %}` it returns a dictionary like: `{'Sidebar': '', 'logo': 'logo.jpg', 'menu': 'menu.html' '...'}` And if I call `{% get_footer %}` it returns a similar dict like: `{'sidebar': '', 'footer': '', '...'}` So that I can put these two dicts into my template like so: `{{ get_header() }} {% block content %} {{ get_content() }} {{ get_footer() }} {% endblock %}` Where I should define `{{ get_header() }}`, `{{ get_content() }}` and `{{ get_footer() }}`? What I don't know is if this is the right way to do things in Django, should I define the template as a function and then return the dict? A: I would probably go with `django.views.generic.base.TemplateView` for this, and serve the template using: `return render_to_response(template, context_instance=RequestContext(request))` You can then extend `TemplateView` for your needs and add in your headers and footers. I will admit that this is possibly the most difficult post I have ever made. I am often bombarded with questions from readers asking me how I stay focused on the blog while I am studying. To be honest, that has been the biggest roadblock I have had to overcome in order to make a living doing what I love. While I am studying, I am also constantly thinking about the next step in my recovery. Once I am done studying I read a book. Then I am very hyper focused on studying for the next day because I know if I am not, then I will have to work. I have this terrible habit of doing things because I feel
