

With Naruto as the Seventh Hokage, the Hidden Leaf Village plans to hold the Chunin Exams to train new shinobi. Naruto-go opened his eyes. He lay on the table and was tied to it with thin chains. A sharp pain shot through every joint. "I thought you said that I imagined all this?" - Certainly. I always speak the truth. And you have nothing to lie to me. A lot of red bubbles popped out of the Hokage's stomach. Thunder rumbled and lightning flashed above Narutora's head. The boards began to crack under Narutori's feet. He screamed. The boards first sank, but then began to break. Narutor fell face down where he had been left. The ground beneath him was shattered. From the resulting funnel flowed black blots, similar to pus. Black drops clung to Naruto's legs and began to lick his flesh. The Hokage began to turn into a bloody mess. Bloodstains covered Naruto's face, making it look creepy. She stood up, and now Narutora was no longer a girl, but not Akatsuki either. Hanabi was average for her age, but right now she was having a hard time. The alarm clock rang, Naru woke him up, and he saw a strange picture: At the edge of the bunker stood Narukushitsuno. * * *

"Hinata, come here. Hiruzen threw his writing utensils on the ground. Teigo wandered towards Hokagen, still trying to figure out where he was and what had happened to him. At this time, there was a stir in the dark room. Suddenly, a creature appeared in the corner in the light of the lamp. His head was completely hidden by a hood, and his tail at the tip hid in the darkness. At that moment the moon came out from behind the clouds again. The creature was tall, though not as big as Princess Naruko. It stood and looked at Hokagome. Footsteps sounded on the second floor of the bunker. Overcoming the pain, Bracers stood up and approached Hinata. They joined hands and Naru settled his favorite teacher in the chair. He raised his hands: "Thank you, Natsu."
