Introduction to Photoshop Layers The main part of any image is usually a single layer. That single layer can have its own color, transparency, and blend mode settings. You can create more layers on top of each other to create more workable layers to include in your finished artwork. As you use Photoshop, you'll be adding more and more layers to your artwork. It's important to remember that the layers are related to the artwork and the layer style settings. For example, a layer styled as a text layer doesn't contain any type of text, nor does a layer you make to create a halftone or line image contain any lines. When a layer has a blend mode set to Multiply for instance, that's the entire layer at that blend mode.

Site Mobile Navigation ENRON COMEUPACING An executive of Enron said yesterday that Arthur Andersen's audit of the energy-trading company was of a "top-notch" quality but that Andersen may have missed two things. One, the company's publicly reported accounting practices were inadequate. Two, he said, a more aggressive approach to the practice of selling futures contracts had just begun to emerge. Terry Le Bourdais, Enron's senior vice president of Global Finance, was the company's designated spokesman for yesterday's conference call with analysts and investors. The accounting problems that Mr. Le Bourdais cited were the same ones being cited by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is leading an Enron-related criminal investigation. Late last month, the company restated billions of dollars of profit in recent years as a result of accounting errors. Mr. Le Bourdais said that Enron has taken steps to improve its accounting and its controls. "They were not perfect at the time of the audit, and they certainly do not represent today's accounting practices," he said. "But they were sufficient to provide Andersen with the professional opinion it was looking for...." Mr. Le Bourdais declined to name what steps the company is taking to improve its accounting. At least part of the problem, he said, is that the company was trying to bring in new practices. "I've been hearing quite a bit recently," he said, "and I'm quite excited about that. We are in the midst of a transition in the derivatives industry, and the people who get involved in the transition get to define what it's going to be. "We are at the very beginning of that transition, and we have seen some of the things coming out of that," he said. "To the best of my knowledge, Enron was one of the people who were looking at how to best use futures contracts to minimize financial risk. What you might call a risk-minimization strategy, not necessarily a riskavoidance strategy." Mr. Le Bourdais said Enron's Chief Financial Officer, Andrew Fastow, "has been someone who has been very active in this transition and is one of the people at Enron who is responsible for the strategy and who is leading the effort to define the future." Mr. Le Bourdais said the strategy would include putting a greater emphasis on using

by Brett Stevens on July 26, 2018 What conservatives believe is that civilization is basically good, but it is constantly being in danger of falling apart, whether it is Trump, the Left, or any other group that disagrees with our agenda. When we were civilized, we did well. We ate well, saw glorious civilizations grow, and that contributed to a sense of well-being that made us more creative, confident, egalitarian and less like a suicide cult. But then the elite created the individual and took the power away from the government, which allowed us to develop two subcultures. The Right faction controlled the government which allowed them to take the wealth, power and popular culture that was intended for all of us, leaving us alone to fend for ourselves in the ruins we built for ourselves. The Left faction, meanwhile, took the individualism away from us. They did not want to live like we did when we were civilized, so we were pushed into living in collectivist communities and into a prison with no walls. The result is that as the Left increasingly dominates politics and economics, civilization itself is beginning to disintegrate. Societies that cannot maintain themselves are breaking down, and societies that are recovering from that are devolving into the fringes. In a civilized society, the individual strives to take the best he can and leave the rest for others. The Leftist takes the best they can give him and uses it against those who will not serve the Left. In less civil societies, we regress to the tribal warfare of the past. Man survives best when there are strong social pressure groups to which he can attach himself for protection and security, and he can have as little as possible to do with people outside of these groups. Leftists do not want a group like this because it will interfere with their need for power and control. They prefer to live among weaklings, and in a group where they do not have to struggle for life, where every activity is a display of strength, where they can play the victim card as soon as someone refuses to surrender. Such communities do not really exist at present, and they never will in the absence of a central power structure to enforce fairness and protect them from rogue elements, which is why Leftists have this dream of a post-civilized society where all people are equal and they have total control over everyone. On the Right, there is some acknowledgement that civilization is a bad thing, but we have no solution other
