Today marks a turning point in the history of the web, as we step into the future of online social networking and communications. From First to Fourth in a short span of time, our use of the Internet will cross-pollinate such that we will use different browsers and different types of communication and communities to meet our daily needs. This will be a dramatic departure from the current state of interconnectivity on the web, and social networks such as LinkedIn, Facebook, or MySpace will no longer be the exclusive "domain" of computer-savvy geeks. I'm not so sure about that. Facebook or MySpace are pretty exclusive when it comes to computer-savvy teens and young adults. I'm older, my friends are older, and we use Facebook and MySpace
