

The truth is that every book has its good and bad moments. What is the difference between books 'Data Structures and Algorithms. Introduction to design and programming algorithms' and 'History of computer science. Introduction. Looking for information'? In ' , among other things, the text about the same ' is written. For example, the difference in writing each line of code from the second book: After all, Russian is not a language. A language is when a line of code cannot appear on its own at the time of writing, and in order for it to appear, you need to do a couple of machine calculations. I didn't write about diarrhea - I'm afraid that few people will understand. UPD: Nevertheless, I will describe diarrhea as it is - for history. 1. Variables in AI. 2. Category theory. 3. Algorithmic and information modeling. 4. Algebra of functions. 5. Basic theory of composites. 6. Basic programming schemes. 7. Organization of the work of the program. 8. Data processing procedure. 9. Data structure.
