In this article, some of the morphological features of the human eye are described in terms of eye muscular, nervous and vascular systems. The human eye is a vascular organ comprising three circulatory systems: the muscular, nervous and vascular systems. The main importance of the eye lies in its optical functions and on the contrary it is very bad for the visual performance of people. The classification of ophthalmic diseases is a large subject for ophthalmologists. This classification should be based on clinical symptoms, morphological features and functional changes rather than on a physiological state. Because the eye is a vascular organ, vascular diseases have been the first and the most important ones to be studied. However, the vascular lesions of the eye can be of great importance to the eye research as to the human ocular surface. By Uwe Parpart North Korea is planning to display military planes that appear to be a scaled-up version of the Light Attack Aircraft (LAA). The aircraft may be ready within a couple of weeks, according to the Daily Telegraph. According to The Korea Herald: "North Korean officials might show off the new aircraft 82138339de
