Computers use various input/output ports, such as parallel, serial, parallel-in-line and other types of I/O ports, for communicating information with external devices. The port I/O pins are utilized for transmitting and receiving data and control signals to and from external devices. The port I/O pins are connected to the circuitry of the computer and are assigned to various functions. Comparison of prediction methods for measuring transfer of radioactivity from agricultural soils to above-ground plants in the Norwegian part of the Pujol Flyveplatte. A comparison of two methods of predicting radiation transfer from soils to crops has been made in the Norwegian part of the Pujol Flyveplatte (PFP) using transfer factors (TFs) based on measured radionuclide concentrations in the soil and plant fractions and a new dispersion-based technique. The TFs were determined for seven radionuclides and three different plant species, and used to predict radiation doses to a maize plant on 20 m² soil plots at the PFP. The dispersion approach allowed TFs to be determined for each species-radionuclide combination separately. The dispersion-based TFs were larger than the TFs based on measured concentrations in the soil and plant. For two radionuclides, the TFs based on measured concentrations were even negative. Using the TFs based on measured concentrations, the radiation dose to the maize was underestimated by between 40% and 80%. The dispersion-based TFs, in turn, underestimated the radiation dose by between 25% and 60%. A simple Monte Carlo technique was used to assess the influence of small-scale soil heterogeneities on the TFs. A slightly increased estimate of the radiation dose was obtained when assuming that the dispersion was caused by random fluctuations, but it seemed that the TFs were not strongly influenced by the soil heterogeneity.

La Guacara In Venezuela's northwestern state of Monagas, a small river named La Guacara flows over rocks and boulders across a series of steep canyons, creating stunning waterfalls that rival most of its bigger siblings in the Andes mountains. La Guacara is named after the Chiriqui tribe's biggest and most sacred tree, which they call "Guacara." In Spanish, "Guacara" means "pearl." The tree grows to the size of a large sequoia and it is among the tallest trees in the world. The tree is located in the commune of San Carlos de Guacara, which is a safe haven for hundreds of birds.

Q: Unable to complete uninstall of an application in the google play store I have tried to uninstall an app on my Nexus 5, but it failed. When I try to uninstall it, it says the following: Unable to complete uninstall of Instant Gallery because the process is already running (app not exited) I have tried to uninstall it via the play store, but it says the following: Unable to perform uninstallation. Uninstalling the app on your device will remove all data from the app. I am using Android 6.0 and I have only one app and one game on the device. I have tried to uninstall the app on my Galaxy S5 as well, but it has the same result. How can I uninstall this app? A: I had the same issue for long. After updating Nexus 5 (6.0) to Marshmallow, I received the same error: This app is already in use by another app Uninstall I tried to use ADB to stop the APP, but it didn't worked for me. Reset Google Play Store and data Failed (emulator) Restart device Failed Failed (phone) All failed!!! Try the steps below: Plug in your phone Open Play Store on your phone Search for "Instant Gallery" Click "Uninstall" It should work. If it doesn't, do not forget to update your Android to Android 6.0 (Marshmallow). Other solution is "AppLock" from Google Play Store. I use this when I have to install some apps without worry or the apps don't interfere with each other.

Q: F# constant type? I know how to define a constant in F#, but I don't understand how they work. For example: type Const1 = Const1 of string * string * string works nicely in F#, and you can do something like this: let c1 (x, y, z) = 1 But say I want to have something like this: let c2 : Const2 = ({"val1", "val2", "val3"}) What would be the correct way to create a constant? How do you even come to this kind of thinking? A: Do you mean: type Const2 = {
