Download HipChat for Confluence is published in the Central Repository of JIRA. Development versions of the plugin can be found in our JIRA-Project: Description The built-in Confluence HTML Editor doesn't allow to upload files and can't save them even if they are uploaded before editing. Also, the current version does not provide the ability to insert HTML code. If you want to use the HTML Editor to insert HTML code, you can try the following plugin: However, it is only capable of inserting a subset of HTML code. Description Confluence now has a new feature: the auto link to wikis using XWiki (openXWiki for Confluence, a free and open-source wiki-software), with an option to send each wiki comment to a discussion. This new feature makes much more useable the "Links to similar wiki articles" with "url-formatted page titles" and gives a much easier way to link and join discussions. Also, if you know your target wiki and have access to its url, you can use the 'Confluence Wiki Name' to look for similar pages, and filter automatically the target page list by page title. The option to send each wiki comment to a discussion is provided by using the 'Conversation Template' feature, which replaces the default default message template. This feature is powered by the "Messaging Wizard" feature, which is a more powerful and customizable version of the webform used in the form editor. Also, if you use the "Wiki to Wiki" feature, to link from a page to a wiki's website, you can configure more settings, such as "The page title is used as the title of the link" and "Add XWiki to the page's title" or "Add XWiki to the page's description". The plugin seamlessly integrates with Confluence, enabling you to set up connections between spaces and HipChat rooms, so that all the team members get instantly updated on a project's progress. In order to deploy it, you must be logged in to your Confluence account as an administrator and look for HipChat in the dedicated section of the 'Add-ons' area. HipChat for Confluence Review David Kervick HipChat is the best chat program I've ever used. It's perfect for asynchronous communication between a small team. There are other tools that offer similar functionality, but for some reason I haven't been able to get as much use out of them. Some people say the message threads can be confusing, but I like to think of it as a discussion board rather than a chat program. It's as if you were using an internal wiki. The best thing about HipChat is that the interface is super-simple to use. You need to have a Google account to sign up, but that's it. The UI is clean and unobtrusive, but not so simple that it's an eye-sore for a tech-savvy person. All in all, it's a pretty great alternative to Skype and TeamViewer and other solutions I've tried. Allan C. HipChat is a wonderful service. Easy to use. Pricing is very reasonable. Features are rich with all sorts of options and customization. One thing I like about this service is the ability to integrate multiple chat rooms together to provide functionality that is unique to different areas of your company. For example I have a HipChat for a Software Development team, a HipChat for Marketing, etc. Now I can easily switch between different rooms and still be logged into one account. If you like to customize your chat experience to match your brand then this is a service that you should definitely try. Sheila Brignall This is a fantastic app. I actually thought about using Microsoft teams instead because I have a 1:1 sync on the client side, but for some reason when my MSFT team is on vacation, I need to have someone set up the HipChat server which is a bit of a hassle when all I want is a text chat. Anyways, HipChat is an absolute must have for any small team working together.
