"An extension that brings back the dislike counter on YouTube back to its roots." Simplicity Using the extension is as simple as clicking on a video to dislike and then using the extension's menu to get a permalink. There are no options for customizing. Fetch the data, estimate the change over time The extension will fetches the information you can see in the menu from the YouTube API, and then uses the observation of the historic dislikes change to estimate the number for a video from now. It should be noted that the API could leave out some new dislikes and new likes sometime in the future. This extension updates when that happens and reset the historical dislikes to zero accordingly. It's not fool-proof, but it's the next best thing The extension might not be the most reliable. The creators update the history data every time a video gets disliked or likes, so the quality of the historical data can vary. It'd make much more sense if these creators integrated the extension, rather than providing a plugin. The user-interface It's simple: the extension makes a dislike button appear in the menu under the dislikes counter and the number of views. There's also a dislike link next to the favicon in the website. In the preferences, you can choose what the plugin does to handle videos that already have dislikes. The default action is to reset the dislikes counter, but you can choose to remove all dislikes (effectively giving the video five new dislikes), or leave the dislikes alone and reset the counter instead. The quality of the data the plugin gets is where some questionably is. The accuracy is hit or miss, but there's no real way to know for sure how it's working unless you actually head over to YouTube. Choosing the best method for the job If you want to count dislikes, while keeping the dislike counter, you should uninstall the extension and use either the extension developed by @hockeyhack, or the one from nowistime.org. Instruction to uninstall Click the extension's icon, and select "Remove from Chrome". Click the uninstall button. This extension needs you to tick the box each time you use it. PLEASE TRY IT BEFORE HITTING THE LIKE BUTTON. I want to know if I am doing it in a reasonable and safe way. The extension is a no-brainer. It won't hurt the like button I thought maybe when I hit the like button, some invisible pixels or something might be added to the frame that surrounds the like button so it changes color or something. Again, I would expect this, and it would be an understandable move. I already know the way to remove these annoying little pixels which also changes the like button. I don't want to do that. This isn't going to spy on you. I was being a little paranoid. This extension isn't going to watch you and do stuff. I read stuff that said this extension was watching my every move. The thing is, I have NO IDEA how this extension works, nor does it do anything I don't expect it to do anyway. I was going to move on with my life, but I felt it was important to tell everyone the truth. I am paranoid, but the truth is, I am now going to stop carrying this extension on my browser. It's not a virus, it's not going to spy on you, it's not going to mess with your browser. It's just a somewhat special browser extension which I think has a few issues, and I don't really want to use it anymore, because I'm not really sure what's going to happen if I do. It's probably just me. It was probably my imagination. About two years ago, an extension appeared on Chrome that allowed you to activate random filters on YouTube videos. It started off with boring and simple filters, but it soon grew into a variety of
