Typeform vs Droplr - matthijsromans ===== colbyolson The only reason it's hard to find anything on these two companies is that they're private. I can't find out much more information about the companies themselves without requiring an in person interview (with a recruiter) or dropping a ton of money into a consulting firm. I'd love to know more about where the industry is headed, so if anyone else knows more about these startups I'd love to see your analysis. ~~~ StavrosK I found out about them through a Tweetstorm by my friend, and I met the founder of Droplr a few months ago. I was impressed with both, although particularly with Droplr's usability and approach. ~~~ colbyolson Was there a particular reason you chose these over other dropbox alternative? ~~~ StavrosK I was looking for alternatives to DropBox, and I found it difficult to find one, so I went to the two closest alternatives I could find (which was DropBox and Driplr) and chose them. ~~~ colbyolson I don't have any knowledge of either, so I'm not trying to be a jerk, but based on the similarities I'd be concerned with the implication that you'd be better off with drop box than with either of these. In a nutshell, the reason I want the data is to make a decision, not to not have to make a decision. But you're right, I'm being a jerk. There's more knowlege about dropbox than these companies. I have no opinion on which is
