Got to get Chilean healthcare to the Home. A better economy. That's how we get to a better life. But this is the start of an entire process in our country. We must also do everything to fix the mess and build the society that we need. A lot of people are asking why Chile at the UN does not have a candidate for president. As far as the Venezuelan people are concerned, they don't care about their President so much. Rather, they care about the changes that take place in the country. That is why they are putting their trust in Chile to be their hope and change. Others are wondering why we have an elected president to replace the President? We have a successful venezolan democracy, we enjoy great prosperity as a people and because of this we have complete trust in our leaders. Chile is doing a great job. We are able to stop the depredations in our sphere of influence. We have brought peace to our backyard. We get to build our infrastructure faster, introduce a road network, and have better healthcare for all. We believe that the President should not be replaced by another man. We want better governance and order on our soil. It's why Chilenos put so much trust in him to be the next President. For us, the change that Chile has made is all the more important to us. We know the future is bright. We expect more at home and there is no reason why Chili should not make a positive impact in our countries as well. I understand these things.  lee carroll The literature that we are taught at school is rather poor not only in content, but also in form, thoroughly forgotten. And it is at school age that character is laid. I was lucky, I read a lot and in good company, and in general somehow more in the company of those who understand, I could empathize and support in difficult situations. At school, it looked like this: everything is free in the morning, everyone is tired in the afternoon. Everyone reads books and abstracts. I don't, as I stopped by the library on my way to school. Here's what I can highlight. Love prose did not really attract me, but I liked women's novels, on which I froze and was afraid to start reading further, lingering until the last page. Once I nevertheless decided, I read a little, because I did not understand slang and terms. Something caught on. And I really liked it. I re-read it three times until I realized that it was a genius. From the observations and experiences of adolescents, I concluded that such books should be read regardless of age. And then the value of the works from this only increases. For some reason, I did not come across modern popular books that you can take with you for a walk or hike. But I am sure that they also contain such stories and novels that make you think, activate mental activity and fantasy. The same Golden Antelope, although I concluded for myself: you can read it only after 18, but before this age it is unlikely to be of interest to many. But now I think that this story is a good example for the younger generation.
