I have not downloaded the final full version yet but I have a dx file which is a little smaller than the full one. A: Autodesk's API is very simple, and most of the features are included in all Autocad versions. Using the API, you can easily implement any functionality in an external C++ application, you just need to download the provided dlls and make a simple DllImport call. A good IDE, which will help you debug/manage your programs, is DevExpress. PS: I had to reverse engineer the API myself, but that's what you asked for. Q: Uploading large files in Yii I know that Yii can upload images and files, but only that. The problem is that I need to upload a file (and, the same time, save its address) to a folder which does not exist yet in that server. I found a solution, but it seems inefficient to me. Here's the code I use: public static $SIZE_LIMIT = 5972800; // 5MB if ($_FILES["image"]["type"]!= "application/zip") { throw new CException(Yii::t('yii','The file type you submitted is not allowed.')); } if ($_FILES["image"]["size"] > self::$SIZE_LIMIT) { throw new CException(Yii::t('yii','The file is too large, it should be no more than {limit}.', array('limit' => self::$SIZE_LIMIT))); } if (isset($_FILES["image"]["tmp_name"]) && $_FILES["image"]["tmp_name"]!= "") { $file = $_FILES["image"]["tmp_name"]; move_uploaded_file($file, Yii::getPathOfAlias('webroot'). DS. 'uploads'. DS. $_FILES["image"]["name"]); } // Get path of filename in the form: media/myimage.ext $explode = explode('.', $_FILES["image"]["name"]); $filename = 82138339de
