A must have tool for anyone using Deep Freeze. Easily uninstalls Deep Freeze and Windows .1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for forming a fine pattern used for fabrication of a semiconductor device and the like, and more particularly, to a method of patterning a thin film used for, e.g., formation of a capacitance film in a capacitor, a wiring, an interconnection, etc. 2. Description of the Prior Art In recent years, semiconductor devices are becoming smaller and integrated at a higher density. Along with this, the thickness of a thin film, such as a capacitance film or an insulating film, to be used for an electrode or a wiring of a semiconductor device is becoming thinner and finer. Consequently, it is becoming important to improve the dry etching and the like properties for the thin film. As an etching method for etching a thin film, which is capable of etching the thin film at a high selectivity and in a good pattern, even if the thin film is made of a material having an extremely low etching selectivity, a method which uses a micro sputter etching gas, such as, e.g., CH₃F, CF₄ or C₂F₆, as a technique of plasma etching is conventionally known (for example, see JP-A 4-258130 (hereinafter referred to as "Patent Document 1"). However, in the etching method disclosed in Patent Document 1, the etching rate of the thin film which constitutes a device is low, and the etching shape is disadvantageously changed. For example, a case is shown in which the thin film is a capacitor, in which an insulation film made of SiO₂ or SiN and a barrier metal film made of Ti are sequentially stacked on a surface of a silicon substrate, and in which a P+ silicon substrate is used as an electrode. The capacitance is obtained by utilizing electric capacitance $C=\epsilon S/d$, in which d represents an insulating film thickness, ϵ represents permittivity of a thin film and S represents an area of a capacitor. In the case where the thin film includes SiO₂ and Ti, the permittivity ϵ of SiO₂ is $\epsilon=9.3\times 10^{-12}$ F/m and the permittivity ϵ of Ti is $\epsilon=5.9\times 10^{-11}$
