After playing a 3D Blu-ray movie for a while, you are likely to feel tired. When watching a 3D Blu-ray movie, the left eye and right eye are turned by a half rotation of 90 degrees. The images that appear on the left eye are presented on the right eye, and vice versa. But for a 3D Blu-ray DVD, both eyes are turned by a full rotation of 90 degrees to present the corresponding images. Due to this difference, a 3D Blu-ray movie is more comfortable than a 3D Blu-ray DVD. Therefore, you may also need to adjust the brightness of a 3D Blu-ray DVD in the different situations. Thanks to the updated brightness adjustment feature in Blu-ray 3D Volume, the 2D brightness adjustment function that is the same as the HDTV Volume can be used for a 3D Blu-ray DVD.
