I have this sentence, There is something that makes me worse than the "Type I" I know that can be written as, There is something that makes me worse than the "Type II" Is there a way to get the "Type I" from "Type II" in some way? Or is the order of the "Type" irrelevant to the sentence? EDIT I want to give an example how I want the sentence to be rendered. 1. If you have some book to study, you can choose the book type II of those available on the shelf. 2. If you have some book to study, you can choose the book type I of those available on the shelf. A: You can say: There is something that makes me worse than [the Type II]. There is something that makes me worse than the Type II. Notice that in the second example, the adjective is in the attributive adjective position and not the predicative. I don't think there's anything wrong with your example. 22 F.3d 1106 73 A.F.T.R.2d 94-1180 NOTICE: Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3 provides that dispositions other than opinions or orders designated for publication are not precedential and should not be cited except when relevant under the doctrines of law of the case, res judicata, or collateral estoppel.Walter ZUCKERMAN; Phyllis Zimmerman, Plaintiffs-Appellants,v.INTERNAL REVEN
