Once you are sure that the problem is not related to another tool installed on the computer and your issue is with DynamoDB, the next step is to look at all the configuration options of DynamoDB. You can do this by first opening the Amazon Web Services application (AWS) from your browser. This way, you can configure the security settings of your DynamoDB account before you make changes to the servers. You can start by adjusting the policy options of the application. The first thing you should consider is your DNS and networking settings. For these settings, you should already have a record from either your ISPs DNS settings or
