Read the article "Water shortages may rival land in terms of stress in the 21st Century." From the ancient Indian epic the Mahabharata, "The three states of the world are: 1) the everlasting swan (the land), 2) a white wild goose (humanity), and 3) the world-sustaining snake (water)." The Land Geologists estimate the Earth's surface area to be approximately 1,300,000,000 square kilometers (500,000,000 square miles) and an average land area of 1,570 square miles per person. With 3.8 billion people expected by 2035, the expected land area of about 5.8 million square kilometers (2.3 million square miles) exceeds the land area of most states. This is an increase of 1,188 percent from today's land area. Water The Earth's average surface water coverage (or ocean area) is 1,400,000 square kilometers (525,000 square miles). The total accessible fresh water on the planet is estimated to be about 6,000 cubic kilometers (1,350 cubic miles), or less than six days of water consumption for every person on the planet. Since the 1970s, the rate of global ocean surface temperature rise has increased at a statistically significant rate of 0.03° C (0.06° F) per decade, twice the global average temperature rise 09e8f5149f
