This seems like it would be a very basic question but I haven't been able to find an answer to it so I figured I'd ask. What's the minimum amount of RAM necessary to run an Ubuntu server? A: Answer for a single user, not for all users For a single user Ubuntu Server will run fine with 128MB, but 1GB is recommended, to keep processes from paging out. If you want to run things like bacula, a mail server, or other utilities that use up a lot of memory, then a 1GB (or higher) is recommended. Answer for a bunch of users If you want a server for a bunch of people to share, then it's not a question of memory, but rather of CPU and storage. The main question here is, "How much does each person want to use the system?" If you only need 1 person to use the system, then 512MB would be plenty. However, if you want to
