In higher plants, carotenoids are important for the prevention of oxidative damage, but the carotenogenic enzyme CCD is also associated with the biosynthesis of vitamin A. The cDNA sequence of maize ccd12 was deduced from the full-length maize cDNA clones isolated in the first study using the RACE technique. The ccd12 gene was found to be coding for CCD, which was localized on chromosome 3 (3.7 Mbp) and was divergently transcribed from the genes coding for the proteins involved in chromophore biosynthesis. The cd11 gene on chromosome 2 was also shown to encode CCD. The expression of ccd12 and cd11 in maize leaves and endosperm tissues was studied by RT-PCR using specific primers. The differential expression of ccd12 and cd
