We can say that a musical note has a definite pitch - this can be a range of a couple of octaves from the base note. But there is a problem that may occur with the ability to accurately judge the quality and pitch of sound. Many people even complain that they still do not get music and sound, they hear only noise. But in fact this is a symptom of something much more dangerous than the inability of one person to judge the pitch of sound. The answer to this problem lies in the ear of the musician. A musician with this ability will hear only the individual tone.
