This is the online form of the traffic camera widget. The U.S. Supreme Court June 2 ruled in favor of a Florida woman who sued as an individual for cutting into the shoulder of another driver, saying the Florida Highway Patrol can arrest a driver or subject the driver to civil penalties but not enforce traffic laws in an illegal manner. In a 5-4 decision, the court threw out a precedent established by the Florida Supreme Court in 1994 in favor of upholding state traffic laws. The Florida Supreme Court ruled a driver who cuts across two lanes of traffic is subject to arrest and penalties because of the danger created by the driver. The Florida Supreme Court said the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in 1993 implied that a driver could be cited and cited for an offense such as cutting across two lanes of traffic. The 1994 Florida Supreme Court decision said that was not the case. The ruling was the third time that the U.S. Supreme Court has taken a traffic ticket case in the last seven years. A federal appeals court in Cincinnati overturned a Detroit truck driver's guilty plea last year after he was fined $72,000 for passing too close to another car. The U.S. Supreme Court said the three-judge panel didn't have the right to toss his ticket because he couldn't possibly have understood what the law was saying to him. In March, the court overturned a Louisiana man's guilty plea for not wearing his seatbelt because the ticket wasn't made clear to the man that he could lose his license if he continued to disregard the law. And in June, the court ruled 5-4 that a Texas motorist violated state traffic laws because she passed too close to another vehicle. Federal authorities cite 5,000 driver-violations a day nationwide and if the drivers are being prosecuted and convicted, they get a criminal record and lose driver's licenses. The case goes back to 1994 when Kenneth Koc had his license suspended after he cut across two lanes of traffic and crashed into an oncoming car. Koc's attorney argued the Hialeah, Fla., police officer was acting as an arm of the Florida Highway Patrol and was enforcing the stop sign he was facing by citing him for a moving violation, which Koc did not commit. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in September 1994 ruled the officer had the right to arrest Koc but then-Florida Commissioner of Agriculture and Consumer Services Gordon D. Baker and the state's attorney general

This is a Dynamic Widget showing the current traffic information in the area Columbia, SC, US. Have any problems? Contact us : support@columbiatraficcams.com So I'm an American. I'm a white person, and I don't live in a bubble. I'm totally aware of the fact that my ideals, my values, my concept of "normal" are all inextricably tied to my whiteness. I'm very aware that my entire worldview, my conception of what it means to be a human being, and to live in the United States, is inextricably linked to a set of ideas about whiteness that have, in fact, been constructed by white people. So here's the thing: I don't like it. It's hard for me to stand on my own two feet as an American. It's hard for me to think of myself as a white person. It's hard for me to take up space in this country that was built on the foundation of a slave society, and I don't like it. If we're going to make progress in the United States, and in this country, in fact, we have to make progress on making sure that we're never in that position again. We have to look to our past and say: Why would we do this? What was it that compelled us to do it? Why is it that only people with white skin could ever do those things? Why is it that the only way we could ever achieve something great was to create a society that could enslave whole populations of people? What could we ever find in ourselves to do that? A global study of RNA sites in proteins by CLIP-Seq reveals a pervasive role of RNA binding in ribosome biogenesis. The precise orchestration of the ribosome biogenesis is a fundamental process of all living organisms. It is also the target of numerous antibiotics used against bacterial infection and cancer. A global in vivo snapshot of ribosome biogenesis provides new insights into its mechanisms. We applied a CLIP-Seq (Cross-Linking Immuno-Precipitation and High-throughput sequencing) approach to study RNA binding in vivo in Saccharomyces cerevisiae. By analyzing more than 500 RNA-protein cross-links, we determined the RNA-binding
