The BMP-2 protects the myocardial integrity of chronic aortic constriction. Acute myocardial infarction is the leading cause of heart failure. To investigate the correlation between the cardiac fibrosis and damage, we analyzed the systolic function and the histological and ultrastructural changes in the myocardial cells and vascular tissues of chronic aortic constriction in BMP-2 knockout mice. Our results showed that compared with BMP-2 knockout mice, mice with aortic constriction displayed no significant differences in the myocardial integrity and cell size. On the other hand, macrophages in the myocardial interstitium were markedly increased in the BMP-2 knockout mice. Furthermore, the secretion of IL-1 β , TNF- α and IL-6 in the peri-aortic tissues was remarkably increased in the BMP-2 knockout mice with aortic constriction, whereas the secretion of IL-10 was significantly reduced. These results suggest that

BMP-2 may protect against the damage of the myocardium in chronic aortic constriction and play a role in repairing vascular tissues.
