PageMaker has been a big part of computer publishing for decades, and is still widely used for PCs today. The program was originally licensed for use on Apple II computers, but is now available for a wide range of platforms, including Apple's macOS, Microsoft Windows, and even Android, BlackBerry and iOS devices. You can find PageMaker books from developers including Adobe, Adobe InDesign and Addison-Wesley, and publishers including AMI, McGraw Hill, Wiley, O'Reilly. PageMaker can be used to create a variety of types of content, from books to periodicals to flyers, brochures and even custom printed products. The program offers a range of features for end users and developers, including the ability to export to PDF or JPG formats, and use references, comments and tags for either hand-editing or importing from other programs or websites. Here are some of the top reasons for using PageMaker: » Develop simple-to-use publishing solutions » Easy to set up and configure, and it's free to try. » Experience true page-layout flexibility. » Access new features with each update. » Create document formats that work on the web. To get started, choose a platform and plan your project. For a simple website or news outlet, you'll need an HTML version of the pages you're creating. If you want to create print material, you'll need an Adobe PDF version, which you can then print out or e-mail to your client. When you're ready to choose a template, first decide how you want to lay out your pages: » Grid-based design is useful for publications with a predefined structure. » Master Pages and Variable Pages help you customize designs quickly. » Pages for specific devices are useful for creating touch-friendly publications. Create simple pages or master pages using the PageMaker

Program that allows you to create a slideshow in a few clicks without programming skills. Rounding out the round of the Cherry MX RGB lineup, we have the Apex, which sports a new cross-shaped switch module with a white, blue, red and green

LED. The Apex RGB boasts RGB Cherry switches with Cherry's MX RGB profile that offers a 35mm rise time (with a 10,000Hz polling rate) that means you can feel every switch and the linear response should still be good even with fast-speed typing. This keyboard also features 80% anti-ghosting, a 200Hz polling rate and a firmware update lock so you can rest assured that your keyboard will stay on its best behavior. Fitting with the Apex RGB, the keyboard also works with Microsoft's Windows-based gaming software, so you can pump out a mouse-keys performance while you multitask. It has it all on tap for competitive gamers. With an accuracy of 0.34mm, the push-rod-based keyboard has a 60-gram actuation force, so you have a feeling of top-notch mechanical performance and responsiveness. The Apex will be available this October for $100. Today,

LANTECH announces the release of the Blade Chroma, a ribbon-actuated keyboard designed with performance and craftsmanship in mind. In addition to the Blade Chroma, LANTECH has released a new mouse, called the Blade XOOM, both made of carbon fiber. Matching its name, the Blade Chroma uses colorful LED lighting to help users see what is typed. The keyboard connects to Windows computers using a USB-A cable. It has an RGB Cherry profile that offers 35mm of actuation force and a 0.6mm of resistance to type. Blades are mechanical switches that offer a quick actuation and a satisfying sound and feel. Meanwhile, a standard mechanical keyboard may have 50 million to 100 million actuations with an average actuation force of 8 grams. The average force on the blade keyboard is 5.4 grams. The Blade Chroma can also be used with an unlimited number of mechanical or membrane switches and has RGB, white, red, blue, yellow and pink LED lights, which can be independently controlled. LANTECH's Blade Chroma features a 60-gram actuation force and a density-r of just 1.05mm. This keyboard also supports an 80% anti-ghosting, a polling rate of 200 Hz and has a 6a5afdab4c

Perfect Photo Show is an easy-to-handle Windows utility that can help you put together slideshows in just a few steps. It offers support for GIF, BMP, JPEG and PNG images, and features intuitive options that can be figured out by all types of users, even the ones less experienced with such apps. Fast setup and user-friendly GUI The installation procedure is rapid and does not require special attention, since it comes packed with familiar options. When it comes to the interface, Perfect Photo Show adopts a regular window with an Explorer-based folder structure that allows you to easily select images for the slideshow while navigating directories. Easily configure project options It is possible to preview the images, add one or more selected files to the slideshow, change the slideshow aspect ratio, slide and transition duration, as well as to create a soundtrack by inserting MP3, OGG, WAV and WMA files. Perfect Photo Show also integrates a few templates which are assigned to the project by default and can be removed. These include dissolve and mosaic transitions, skipping animation, as well as zooming in and out (the selected effects are randomly applied to the slideshow). The project can be either turned into an AVI file with SD or HD quality, or prepared for publishing on YouTube and uploaded, after specifying the quality level and account credentials. Evaluation and conclusion The tool takes reasonable time to compile a slideshow out of the selected images, while remaining light on system resources. Unfortunately, it crashed a couple of times in our tests when we attempted to preview the slideshow. Other than that, it did not hang or crash. It does not include rich features for advanced users, but Perfect Photo Show offers approachable methods for quickly creating slideshows without configuring complicated settings, mostly addressing casual users. Slideshow Maker is a multipurpose tool to create cool slideshows and images without the hassle of having to learn any technical tricks. It is ideal for professionals and beginners alike, and can be used to create slideshows for presentations, desktop backgrounds, printing, video projects and web pages. You can edit, crop, flip, rotate and add effects to images and videos; apply audio effects and transitions between your slides; export images as GIFs, JPGs or BMPs; and add transitions and audio tracks to your slides. You can even add background music and sound effects to the slideshows you create. You can also create a logo animation to go along with your slideshow; and add a
