And whenever you launch your application, these custom buttons will automatically appear on your taskbar. Screen clipping example from this tutorial showing a Taskbar and Start Menu button. Please Note: We are not responsible for the content of the downloadable files. On Mac OS X, an application can have a taskbar or start menu button by right-clicking the application's main menu item. For a complete list of supported OSX applications see this page. Using AppleScript we can programmatically create a startup item for our application. This tutorial provides source code which you can copy and paste into your script. The problem with having a startup item in your application is that you can't launch it by simply double-clicking it. Here is the startup item we are creating for this tutorial. This item will appear on the main menu bar, and you can double click it to launch the app. If you want to create an additional menu item for your application, click on the "Options" menu item and select "Show main menu item." Now the "Open" menu item will appear, which is the command that will launch your app. Here is the AppleScript we are using to create the button. Substitute the app-name string with the name of the application you wish to have a button for. Please Note: The
