It was a day to show off heritage—and goof off The Queen’s Birthday Parade was celebrated in many ways in English town of York. “Everything I’m wearing today my great-grandmother made,” said Niall Dougal as he came down the street in his tap pants. He was one of the more than 1,000 volunteers that came to take part in the local day of celebration with the ever-popular “Millennium Tart.” Story continues below Dougal was among the 2,000 or so people who gathered at the main starting point at Pilgrim’s
