We have a free tool for you that will take the load off your hosts. VMotion is a feature that will be available in vSphere 6.0 and allows your VM's to be migrated to a new ESXi host while it is still powered on. By using a combination of VIBs and migration policies, vMotion can be run on your vSphere cluster, allowing to move VMs to different ESX hosts even while the hosts are still powered on and performing normal VM operations. VMotion works by creating a unique VMware network for each VM. All network traffic between the VM and ESX is done over this unique vNIC on the ESX host. This means that the VM will not be sharing the vMotion traffic with other VMs, resulting in lower network load. Within the VDI world, this is the standard approach to move VMs around, it's in fact how VMware provides deployment and configuration services such as Provisioning, Power on to Off site, or VAMI.
