Circulating leptin concentrations have been reported to be low during the luteal phase of the menstrual cycle in women, while little information is available regarding the hormonal state and leptin levels in young Japanese women. The purpose of the present study was to investigate the influence of the menstrual cycle on plasma leptin levels in Japanese women. Total body fat mass, measured by bioimpedance, did not differ significantly between the follicular and luteal phases (24.3 +/- 4.3 and 27.5 +/- 5.1 kg, respectively;  $p = 0.17$ ). Circulating leptin levels were significantly lower in the luteal phase than in the follicular phase (4.7 +/- 2.3 and 15.7 +/- 10.5 ng/ml, respectively;  $p < 0.05$ ). BRAZIL: Bani's Arrest Is Part of State-Corruption Corruption One of President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva's aides is under arrest on suspicion of paying bribes for state contracts. Brazil's probe into alleged widespread corruption in Lula's administration is so far exposing only one minister, but the investigation is a reflection of the scale of corruption on display in Brazil, says a New York Times correspondent in Rio.
