References Category:Weight Category:Finance softwareQ: How can I replace an item/value from a command line sql script in a node.js process? I have a big sql script with a lot of insert statements inside. It works, but I have to be writing this script. I have another program, lets call it source, which can read it and act upon it. Right now it reads the file line by line, and it looks at each line to see if it should do anything to it. But instead of doing this, I want to tell it "if (line == '') replace () with the line right below it" I thought maybe I could just change line by line and then run the script, but I can't seem to find anything which gets close to this. Is it possible? A: Sounds like you need to run sed on the file. There are alternatives for doing this in different languages, but for example this would work in node.js: const fs = require('fs'); fs.readFile('file.sql', 'utf8', (error, data) => { // Split the data into lines const lines = data.split(' '); // Loop through lines for (let line of lines) { // Split the line into two parts - the first part should be // the line number, the second part is the actual line const [number, line] = line.
