Q: Changing SSL Certificate name in Selenium I am writing a selenium automation to test webpages, and would like to change the name of the SSL certificate so it is not displayed in the title bar of the browser. Is this possible? If so, how do I do it? A: No, the browser doesn't do this, so to make it behave differently you'll have to modify the web site. A: No, it's not possible. Please see here for details on certificate pinning. Q: Firebase functions do not exit after the call I am using the firebase functions to trigger Cloud Functions when data is written to Firestore. According to the documentation, if a function does not return anything, Cloud Functions will stop and kill the process. However, it does not exit. The NodeJS console output shows no errors. And I need to manually kill the function. I can't find any document about this. Any idea? A: Turned out to be a network issue. My onWrite was returning nothing. Petrochemical industry is already one of the most cost-effective industries in the world, with the most cost-efficient sources of methane. The methane fuel is also one of the cleanest fuels and, like coal, is renewable. There are three main ways to convert methane into liquid fuels. One way is via the Fischer-Tropsch process. In this process, methane is converted into heavier liquid fuel, such as liquid synthetic diesel and synthetic gasoline, which then need to be refined. The second way is via direct conversion, where methane is converted directly into gasoline, diesel or jet fuel. The third way is via reforming, where methane is converted to form hydrogen, which is then transported to be processed into liquid fuel. Figure 1: Map of areas in the USA that are currently producing methane from oil and gas wells. Source: IEA Many oil and gas fields in the US are producing as much as 10 million tons of methane per year, which is at least 1.5 billion m<sup>3</sup> of natural gas each year. It is estimated that there

From the section Scottish Premiership Ross McCormack's seventh goal of the season was enough to earn St Johnstone all three points against Premiership champions Celtic. Steven Gerrard's men came into the match after a 1-0 defeat by Hibernian, but went ahead in the first half through Nir Bitton. The visitors were ahead when Xherdan Shaqiri fired home and McCormack scored from the spot to condemn Celtic. The home side were untroubled after half-time as they were only denied a second by an excellent save from Daniel Harkes. The win was their first in seven visits to McDiarmid Park since November and means St Johnstone are only a point behind Celtic in the table. Hibernian are still in the running for the League Cup final as they win the tie in quarter-final replay. St Johnstone showed their resolve to recover from a shocking 6-0 home defeat by Ross County just under a month ago and have shown their ability to perform at this level since. They needed a strong start after the defeat to County to get the better of those who triumphed in Perth. At times they looked f30f4ceada
