Last week the Democratic National Committee (DNC) leadership said that they would be replacing Debbie Wasserman Schultz as chair of the DNC. This week, a progressive activist has been chosen as the replacement for Wasserman Schultz. Myrna Perez, a member of the Congressional Black Caucus and a leader in the Congressional Progressive Caucus, will be the new chair of the DNC. The new chair of the DNC, Myrna Perez, said that she plans to build on the steps of the last chair, but that there is a lot of work to be done in order to get the job done. “The first thing I’m going to do as chair of the DNC is to rebuild trust with our base by demonstrating that we stand with our party’s base and our Democratic base. We’re going to have our first meeting with the Democratic Women’s Leadership Council, where we’re going to talk about issues that are important to women,” she said.
