Pettibone was born in San Jose, California, and attended Stanford University for a degree in physics. Pettibone produced the horror films Candyman (1992) and Waxwork (1994) before directing the hit 1996 comedy-horror film The Monster Squad (released in the UK as Zombies of Mora Tau and The Monster Squad: Who's Your Daddy?) The film has been cited by the Guinness World Records as the first film to have a segment about horror cinema, which aired on MTV. He also directed the film Whatever It Takes (2002) and the sequel The Monster Squad 2: New Blood (2004). He produced the 2004 horror film Quarantine. He is also the younger brother of Dan O'Bannon, the director of the cult classic horror film The Return of the Living Dead.
