The association of family history of cancer with incidence of squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck was assessed for 12,592 cases of squamous cell carcinoma from the SEER (Surveillance Epidemiology and End Results) database. A family history of cancer was defined as first- or second-degree relatives (mother, father, brother, or sister) with cancer. Increased risks of squamous cell carcinoma were found for second-degree relatives (mother [1.5-fold], father [1.3-fold], brother [1.2-fold], and sister [1.7-fold]). Moderate risks were noted for third-degree relatives, relatives with cancer at ages \geq 50 years. To further clarify the effect of these risks, risks were examined according to a number of factors, such as sex, race, tumor site, and histologic grade. These findings may have implications in screening and prevention of this disease.JOIN IN OUR COMMENTARY ON FEDERAL ELECTION CAMPAIGN, ALL POLITICAL EVENTS AND COURT CASES BELOW, "THE EXECUTIVE COMMISSION: LEADING THE FEDERAL LEADERSHIP PRIMARY INTO 2020": -----
