Disk Maintainer allows you to add files to the places of your CDs/DVDs. Customizing: There are many parameters to customize and tweak your wishes. Here are some of them: ⬚ You can add the relative path of a Disc, which will be mapped to that Disc, to the list of Places. For example, if you add the disc image with the name /isolinux/boot/vmlinuz on /dev/hda3, it would be added under the /dev/hda3/ /isolinux/boot/vmlinuz, this path can be used to load the image /isolinux/boot/vmlinuz into an absolute path. (Note: The path will be relative to the path you specify and the path of the currently opened disc). ⬚ You can create an image of the current disc, which will be mapped to the other discs of the same type, under the name of the disc, or you can allow the user to select which disc is mapped to an image, which can be used as is. ⬚ You can specify a file of the same path as a target, which will immediately map to it. ⬚ You can map a CD/DVD to a folder or a disk. ⬚ You can specify a disc to map to the /dev/null; if this is specified, the specified Disc will not be mapped to any place else. ⬚ You can map all the CDs/DVDs by specifying the path as, e.g. /dev/hda1, and these can be configured to be automatically mapped to the current path (under some path). ⬚ You can map the whole filesystem by specifying /dev/hda. ⬚ You can map each of the directory in the root of a disc to the drives, or specified drives. ⬚ You can specify the media type of the currently opened disc ⬚ You can specify the media type of the discs to be mapped to a disc image ⬚ You can add media Types which are not applicable to any disc, such as Open Firmware ⬚ You can add a series of media Types, such as CD or CD-R, a CD or CD-RW, CD-R or a DVD, DVD-R,
