Freefonts.co..Chelsea will not be distracted by bids for the England striker, says manager Jose Mourinho Chelsea manager Jose Mourinho says he will not be distracted by bids for England forward Daniel Sturridge. Sturridge has been linked with moves away from Stamford Bridge this summer in the form of a return to Liverpool and a loan move to West Brom. His form is currently well down on where he was in the early part of the campaign and after an impressive Europa League run Liverpool have informed Chelsea that they are not going to be keeping him at Anfield this summer. Manager Jose Mourinho has no interest in selling his best player but he is keeping a close eye on Sturridge's situation in order to manage his own squad. "I'm not going to talk about other clubs' business, they talk about ours. I'm not [going to give] any more comment because the club will talk about the things that are being said about Daniel, about his future. "He has been fantastic this year. I have a great relationship with the player, he's been a great professional and a great example. "What I know, what the club knows, what the supporters know is that he is going to be part of our group for the next few years and with good reason. "Now that he's doing this so well in Europe he's going to have a lot of chances to prove what he's doing on the pitch." The former Chelsea manager remains coy on what his plans are for Sturridge, with only his name having been linked with a move, but Mourinho does not believe the situation will become a distraction as he moves towards the start of the Premier League season. "He's a Chelsea player, he's
