Trump's private charitable foundation used a Brooklyn church as its headquarters and later as a credit card processing center while the real estate mogul ran for president, according to a Manhattan Surrogate's Court lawsuit. The lawsuit filed Tuesday accuses Donald Trump and his two oldest sons, Donald Jr. and Eric Trump, of directing an illegal scheme to use "the Donald J. Trump Foundation as their personal checking account, their business checking account, and their personal credit card processing account." "The Foundation served as their piggy bank, through which they gave money to friends and paid for goods and services without any formal or no disclosure or documentation that the Foundation was being used for their personal benefit," the suit says. The lawsuit is the first major challenge to the president's charitable foundation, which has faced numerous complaints since it was founded in 1987. It also raises questions about the Donald J. Trump Foundation's finances, raising the possibility that the charity's assets were used to pay legal fees for the Trump family in response to the lawsuit. "We are in receipt of the lawsuit," the Trump family's lawyer, Alan Garten, said in a statement. "It's been a sad story for a long time. Hopefully it will end soon. If it ends soon, the family will find out who we're dealing with." The lawsuit was first reported by The Washington Post and the Guardian. In response to the lawsuit, Trump's attorney, Alan Garten, issued a statement
