When you reverse engineer you will get to know many things from the system. Here you'll get to know about the latest Viruses and other malicious programs. As many of the viruses are spreading like fire, thus we must keep in mind that every virus will always have some weaknesses and in this blog post we'll discuss about the weaknesses of the booby-trapped J2RE loader. (This post is from my Co-author, Akash, a good friend of mine) J2RE Authoring Tool (JAR) is in this list, because of its impact on the system. You might want to reverse-engineer those viruses. J2RE Authoring Tool (JAR) infects any system that it is attached to in order to make modifications to. JAR is a Trojan in that it alters files on the system it is attached to. In the most common cases, when JAR is running on Windows systems it will install additional files and registry entries in order to subvert the system, and place itself as the default. JAR. It will open an administrative console. Here it will go through a systematic method to infect files and registry entries, as well as detect the permissions of the system. Once J2RE Authoring Tool (JAR) is attached to a system, it then installs a JVM and adds a configuration file called jvm.cfg in the system folder with the following command: if anyone knows about this please tell me and i will be very thankful... It is of two types: 1- JARF – This contains JAR files, which are created by the method described below. 2- JARF.BAT- This is a batch file which starts the JARF. It can be found in the same folder and it contains another batch file called JARF. If the second file is missing, the first file will be ignored and the process will not start. For this reason, it is recommended that you delete or renumber the file JARF.bat if you don't intend to use it. Default Actions: 1.-Start the file JARF by double clicking on it 3da54e8ca3
