Description Telepad is an intuitive desktop client which enables you to establish the connection to your Android phone and remote control your computer. The application allows you to transform your Android touchscreen phone into a remote control which can replace the mouse and keyboard for your computer. Desktop client and phone app Telepad comes with two components, the desktop client and the phone app, both of which are required in order for the process to properly function. Both tools need to be installed on their supported platforms, then you need to select the connection type. Telepad supports Wi-Fi or Bluetooth connection between the telephone and the computer. The purpose of this type of connection is to be able to step away from the computer, further than the USB cable can reach. The desktop client runs in the background, however, you can prompt the main window, in order to change the selection and view notifications. Use your phone as a remote control As soon as the connection between your PC and Android device is established, you can start using the screen of your phone as a mouse pad / digital keyboard. From this moment on, you can step away from the desk, yet easily control your computer. The application can transfer all the main functions and shortcuts from the mouse/keyboard to the phone, including click, double click (double tap), right-click and window drag. Moreover, you can use special characters while typing or use hotkey combinations - with Ctrl and Alt. You may also access the function keys - F1, F2 etc. Turn your phone/tablet into a wireless set of PC peripherals

Telepad allows you to use your Android touchscreen phone or tablet as a remote mouse pad and digital keyboard. All the basic functions you can perform with the two input devices can be accomplished from the touchscreen: right-click, double click, window drag, hotkey combinations or volume adjusting. All the main tabs of the program interface are accessible via the smartphone. However, you can also use the back (home) button to launch specific features. Depending on the selected connection type, the desktop client can be either a stand-alone application or a plug-in to the program interface. You can switch between Telepad and your Windows desktop, or you can manage multiple connections at the same time and have a single set of connections accessible at the same time.

Main features Remote desktop connection. You can control your computer from the desktop using the touchscreen or from the phone. You Telepad is an intuitive desktop client which enables you to establish the connection to your Android phone and remote control your computer. The application allows you to transform your Android touchscreen phone into a remote control which can replace the mouse and keyboard for your computer. Desktop client and phone app can be used separately or together as one. Telepad works with Windows, Mac OS, Linux, and Android. Features Hand-motion input: is the main feature of Telepad. The user can move the cursor with the finger and use gestures (to-and-fro, double-and triple-click, dragging-and-dropping) to control the cursor on the screen. Customizable hotkeys: The user may create own shortcut, for example "Ctrl-W". The customized hotkeys may be send to the Windows operating system to bind its functionality. Supports creating shortcut: you can create your own shortcut with three tasks: DND, Window management, and system settings. DND enables you to move the cursor to an area on the screen, and open the app with the default app. Window management allows you to move the cursor to an area and zoom in or zoom out the window to the area. System settings switches off the system sounds, turn on or turn off the data / wireless connectivity, etc. Resize the window: you can resize the window with your smartphone as the input device. Any Desktop window can be resized with this feature, including the web browser, the text editor, the office document or any other document viewing software. Drag-and-drop: the tool also allows you to drag any file to the recycle bin, the desktop, or the message send tab, as the standard Windows window control. Simplicity: the user just need to install the application and connect the phone and computer.
