REAL MADRID should probably have played a little less. If anything, they played too much. It is true that Jose Mourinho's side had suffered a relatively lacklustre display against Sevilla in the Champions League on Wednesday night, but they had already allowed the Spanish side to take the lead inside 10 minutes. There was still time for them to claw their way back and, in fact, they managed to create two good chances at the Bernabeu. However, at full-time, Sevilla were still celebrating their victory, and Real were left to rue their lack of chances to score. 2 Julian Alvaro hails 'amazing' Sevilla performance "We came out with more energy than in the other games and we did all the things we had to do," Mourinho told reporters.
