Why the name Photoshop has stuck In the early 1990s, a group of graphics designers at Adobe were looking to come up with a new naming convention. When they came across the term Photoshop, they were struck by how good it sounded. "Photoshop" seemed like a very good name for a new product, and so it was adopted as the official name for Adobe's raster image editor. What is a raster image? If a digital photo is a portrait of a one-dimensional object — a sheet of paper with a picture of a face on it, for instance — an image in Photoshop is like a landscape: a digital picture of a two-dimensional object. Depending on the software used, a raster image can either be a flat object on a computer's hard drive or a complete file on a CD. A vector image, by contrast, is composed of basic shapes that describe the object to be depicted. Photoshop can't save a vector image. An image layer holds the image. It's like a sheet of paper with an object sketched on it. If you used an ordinary pencil to sketch the face, you'd create a layer. The face is the object on the paper, and you create a layer above it. By overlaying other layers onto your image layer — possibly layers of color or shading — you can add object details to the face, such as hair and eyes. How do you get an image from your camera or scanner into Photoshop? Photoshop can import both TIFF and JPEG image files. If vou've purchased a professional-quality scanner, you may need to use a different program to edit images produced by your scanner. Some of the most common ways to import a file into Photoshop are as follows: Drag your camera's image files to the desktop in the Organizer. (You also can open files from CDs and directly from your camera's memory card.) Click the Import button at the bottom of the Photoshop window and choose Camera Raw from the list of file formats. (This process is covered in Chapter 7.) Take the file directly to a Photoshop document. Click File⇒Open. (Or navigate to the image you wish to open.) To open an existing document, click Open from the Windows menu. Double-click an image. If you choose to scan a photo, you may be able to save the scanning to your Photoshop file, instead of scanning the entire photo. Read more about

A teenager has been arrested on suspicion of murdering a girl who was due to be "bride and groomed" for sex, police have said. Detectives have arrested a man in connection with the death of two-year-old Victoria Climbie, who died in a house in Great Dover Street in Peckham, south-east London. Officers were called to the property at around 12.30pm on Sunday after the girl was found in a critical condition. Scroll down for video The victim was kept in the house for a number of days before she died The youngster was assaulted and raped before being beaten and strangled to death in the house She was put in a pram and carried out of the property but died in hospital after being taken to University College Hospital. Detectives from the homicide and sexual offences command unit, who are investigating the death, said the teenager had been arrested. "Officers from H&VCC attended and arrested a man aged in his late teens on suspicion of murder," said Detective Chief Inspector Richard Barnard. "The arrested man has been taken to custody." Detectives said the girl was kept in the house for a number of days before she died. They believe she was assaulted and raped before being beaten and strangled. The girl, known only as Victoria, was taken to University College Hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival at 2.50pm. The suspect was taken to a south London police station where he was quizzed for several hours before being charged. WASHINGTON -- A White House petition demanding the United States start withdrawing its forces from Afghanistan was launched Monday by Vietnam veterans. Signers of the petition, which was organized by the World Can't Wait group, said that unless there's a change in troop levels, they will withdraw their signature. "We will stop signing, unless by the end of 2011 there are fewer than 100,000 American soldiers in Afghanistan," WCBW said in a statement. "If by the end of 2011 there are more than 100,000 American soldiers in Afghanistan, we will launch the process of beginning withdrawal, in consultation with our allies." In September the White House said that about 10,000 troops were still in Afghanistan. About 23,000 U.S. troops are there now, mostly to train and assist in the Afghan security forces. WCBW praised the anonymous Iraqi blogger who conceived the idea and launched the petition, which was begun in response to a call for protesters to wave flags to protest the ongoing U.S. military mission in Iraq. A group of 20 or so activists from WCBW gathered Monday near the Vietnam Veterans Memorial wall to hand out white flower bouquets. They carried some of the flags that had been waved during Vietnam protests at Arlington National Cemetery. One veteran who'd signed the petition stood in the drizzle and watched the line of people who joined WCBW. "I think this is a great thing for people to come together and show their support," he said. By early afternoon, the tally was about 12,000 signatures, said Traci Hiebert, vice-president of Iraq Veterans Against the War. It was unclear whether the tally would reach the 25,000 required for a response from the White House. Hiebert said she's not sure if the goal is achievable, noting that the number of Vietnam War veterans has declined. "It could be a symbolic effort," she said. It's hard to know how much support the online petition has. The signature is anonymous. But former Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, has said that he wants to challenge the president in the 2012 presidential election on the basis of more than a million signatures on a petition. But it's unclear whether voters would vote for a president who ran on an anti-war platform. Eric Montesano, 60, of Stone Harbor, N.J., said he first thought about signing the petition when he saw
