Spot's task-focused organizing capabilities help keep your desktop clear and clutter-free. It automatically moves text, videos, images and other files into specific categories for easy retrieval. The program offers sorting options for multiple criteria, allowing users to group similar files together easily. Smart Pane Spot quickly scans files and finds your most recent documents and multimedia content. Based on what it finds, it automatically moves them to a designated "Recent" section for easy access. Advanced Search Spot is also equipped with a powerful search system. You can use up to five different criteria to make your search more specific. Built-in smart search engine abilities mean you can use regular phrases like "IMG", "JPG" and "PNG" to quickly find relevant information. Multiple Columns The program features a four-column sorting and filtering view that makes it easy to locate what you're looking for. You can sort files by date, size, name, extension and type. The "my" section is also labeled and shows you which files in the folder are yours. Permanent Elements Spot gives you the chance to permanently move files, such as pictures and videos, to their respective designated folders. You can also create folders of your own and link them to a "created by" element. If the file is stored in the "recent" folder, a special icon will be added. Start from a clean slate. You can have the app simply scan and detect the files that are no longer needed, or you can manually select all those files you want to have removed. iSurveill's main target audience: The image and video files you collect with your web camera(s) are valuable data that can be used to track property damage, and to identify thieves. The DVRs (Digital Video Recorders) installed at your home can be used in many ways, but especially to watch the security camera footage and get a better view on what's going on in the house 24/7. The software allows you to view what is captured by the cameras remotely, just like those spy cameras that many of you already have installed. What's particularly interesting is that images are very large, i.e. the video files are much more than the files created by a regular camera. Additionally, images and videos can be viewed in full resolution, but

Learn more: The clock stops because the ipad gets an ip address from somewhere else. If there is an apartment where there is another wifi router, also the ipad sometimes stops working or i have to reboot the device. I think that is an important solution, but the user must be informed if a reboot of the ipad is not enough to have the device work properly. The notification of the failure of the wifi has been a small thing, that it must also be improved. In addition, after the notification you press on the screen to "restart" the ipad and that does not work, I would like that the ipad "opens" the configuration of the network, since not doing that does not cause a problem, but I will have to start to reboot it. This video was filmed during the initial stage of the implementation of a new anti-shoplifting detection app on the Blackberry PlayBook platform. The app, which was developed by Erickson Consumer Products, has been embedded in 12,000 PlayBooks around Las Vegas, where it was tested as part of a marketing effort. The video highlights the key functionality of the app including the ability to detect a person leaving the store with the aim of performing a shoplifting act. Once this occurs, the person is given the option to return to their vehicle or continue to be followed by an Interception Officer. If the person chooses to continue to be followed, they are requested to surrender their goods. # Blackberry PlayBook | Storefront | Erickson Consumer Products On January 1, 2012, the BlackBerry PlayBook and tablet computer will go on sale in leading U.S. retail stores at an introductory price of $499, compared to the current price of $599 and $799 for the iPhone 4 and iPad 2, respectively. iSurveill Free [Mac/Win]

iSurveill is a pretty lightweight and handy application that records webcam activity. Having a quick access button for control and recording time management options would certainly be a plus! Its downsides however, include the lack of quality settings, as well as options to manually trigger the capturing session, the impossibility to end the recording manually and the lack of support for video recording. What's New In iSurveill?

iSurveill is a lightweight webcam application. It records webcam activity and has a motion sensor feature. Description iSurveill is a lightweight webcam application. It records webcam activity and has a motion sensor feature. Overall, the application is pretty lightweight, both in terms of systems resources used, as well as the set of features it comes equipped with. What you need to keep in mind though, is that you need to have Adobe AIR installed on your computer for proper deployment and usage. The main window only comes in a fixed size and includes a decent preview area, as well as a set of options and controls. A disappointing aspect is that the application is only capable of capturing still images, with no support for clips. Only records still images Amongst the options you get to work with, you stumble upon a manual trigger for the recording session, a button to take a single snapshot, the possibility to have the capture task automated by enabling a motion sensor, toggle real a time preview and a few time management options. Sadly, pictures are only taken at a minimum of 10000 ms, which represents 10 seconds, time in which a lot can happen. Further decreasing practicality is the lack of options to stop the recording session automatically. Unless the corresponding button is pressed, the specified folder to store images is filled with snapshots taken at the specified interval. No camera or quality settings What's more, there are no quality settings to work with. The only file type generated is JPG so you need other applications for editing or enhancing. Moreover, webcam color tools need to be handled from the driver or operating system control panel, because of the lack of a quick access button. Output resolution also leaves something to be desired, pictures being saved at a maximum resolution of 640 x 480. To end with Taking everything into consideration, we can say that iSurveill is not really what you'd expect from a surveillance application. The major disadvantage is the lack of support for video recording, further spiraling practicality downwards including missing options to make it run on startup, configure webcam color settings or even set the recording to end automatically.
